'. . . at the twilight's last gleaming'

IT WAS THE CHILDREN'S CHOIR from Trinity Presbyterian Church in West Sacramento that had the honor of singing the national anthem before the River Cats played last Wednesday at Raley Field. The River Cats took home a 7-1 victory over the Oklahoma Redhawks in Triple-A minor league baseball play that evening.

Body of Sacto man recovered

A man's body was pulled from the Sacramento River on Monday afternoon.

Boaters near Sand Cove noticed the body and reported it. West Sacramento police and firefighters, Sacramento firefighters and boats from the Sacramento police and Yolo County responded. The body was recovered af ew feet from the West Sacramento shoreline and taken to the Broderick Boat Ramp, where the Yolo County Coroner took possession.

The deceased man was later identified as 54-year old Michael Felton of Sacramento, reported Lt. Derek Brummett of the West Sacramento Police Department.

The body showed no obvious signs of trauma, and an investigation continues, said Brummett.

Esparto woman is first Yolo death from 'swine flu'

County health officials said last week that the first Yolo County resident has died of the H1N1 ("swine flu") virus.

The victim was a 30-year old Esparto woman, who died at Woodland Memorial Hospital after be admitted with the disease.

The flu strain is often mild, but has killed victims across the U.S.

"Our hearts and sympathies go out to the victim's family," said County Health Officer Joseph Iser in a press release. "Her death is a sad reminder of the serious threat posed by the H1N1 virus."

Meanwhile, officials are also investigating the death of another Yolo resident as a possible swine flu case. A 40-year old UC Davis clerical worker was found dead Aug. 2 in her Woodland apartment after experiencing flu-like symptoms.

A place to 'fill up the tank' for those electric cars

A north-area filling station now has the first electric vehicle charging station in West Sacramento, according to its owner, DMC Green, Inc.

The charging station is at Harbor Point 76 gas station, near Reed Avenue and Stillwater Road. It's the first of 40 DMC plans to install statewide.

The station also offers E-85 ethanol and biodiesel under DMC's brand.

"In addition to the electric vehicle charger, the availability of E-85 and biodiesel lowers the demand for oil and helps keep prices down," said Mat Ehrhardt, air pollution control officer of the Yolo Solano Air Quality Management District, in a press release. "Domestically produced fuel reduces our dependency on foreign oil, but more importantly, supports sustainable new business in the Sacramento region."

Richard Loenthal, CEO of Coulomb Technologies (which partners with DMC), said electrical filling stations are taking root.

"Electrical vehicle (EV) infrastructure is beginning to take root in California and with DMC's plans for a retrofitted filling station network, EV drivers will be able to travel freely throughout California with peace of mind, knowing they can locate a place to charge their plug-in vehicles."

Port bullish on channel deepening

Long-planned project would add five feet to channel's depth

The Port of West Sacramento released a public statement last week saying "momentum continues to build" for federal funding of a plan to deepen the port's deepwater channel.

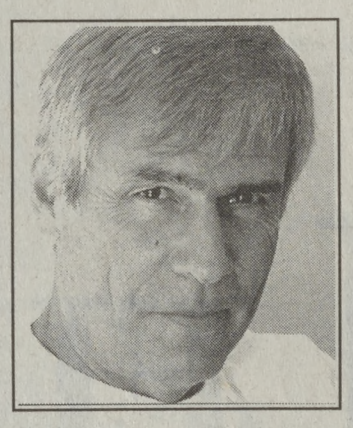
"Deepening the channel from 30 feet to 35 feet along its entire 43-mile length will enable more than 75 percent of fully loaded ocean-going freight ships to directly serve the Sacramento region," said the statement, and will "significantly strengthen the Port's role as a key Northern California goods-movement facility."

The port has traditionally depended on bulk agricultural products such as rice, wood chips and fertilizer, but has also made forays into cargo such as cement. Its managers have long maintained that a deeper channel is needed to allow visits from deeper-draft ships.

President Obama included $10 million towards the deepening project in his proposed 2010 Civil Works budget. The port intends to start work on the $80 million dredging project in 2010 and finish in 2013.

The legacy of Richard M. Nixon is still with us—

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

A longtime West Sacramento resident who from time to time contributes thoughtful and well-written letters to the News-Ledger recently stopped me on one of my evening strolls through my West Sacramento neighborhood and said, "I just finished a really good new book on Richard Nixon. It's called Nixonland. Would you be interested in reading it?"

"Sure," I said, having long been fascinated by the life and times of the very complicated man who was arguably the most interesting American politician of the past half-century.

Over the years, I have read more books on Nixon than I care to count, including his lengthy autobiography. And my wife once wanted to throw something at me because I kept watching the Watergate hearings from gavel to gavel during our honeymoon. So Nixonland, which is mostly about the Nixon of the 1960s and 1970s, didn't tell me a lot of things I didn't already know, but it did put forth an interesting little theory – that Nixon and his insecurities and resentments and paranoia were largely responsible for infecting mainstream American politics with the current vicious, never compromise, take no prisoners kind of politics we tragically have now. And it also reminded me of the following column, part of which appears below:

I was down in Southern California a few weekends ago and as I have often done in the past, I dropped by the Richard M. Nixon Presidential Library and Birthplace in Yorba Linda for a little visit. Although I was never a very big fan of President Nixon while he was alive, if one is fascinated with the history of American politics, his library has all kinds of interesting things to do and see and buy. And maybe most fascinating of all is the family house where Nixon's beloved mother gave birth to him in the smallest of bedrooms, of course having no idea that her son would someday become the leader of the free world.

Anyway, while I was standing around in the section of the library they have set aside for visitors to purchase books and other Nixon memorabilia, a short, stocky, very nicely dressed man (I'll call him Rush) who appeared to be about 65 years old suddenly tapped me on the shoulder and said, "You don't look like a Nixon Republican to me."

I returned his smile and said, "Now why do you say that?"

He pointed down to my red tennis shoes and said, "Because only a Liberal would be caught dead in those things."

"Actually," I said, "I'm a registered Independent, but you're not the only one giving me grief over my new red tennis shoes. My wife and kids think I've gone over the edge, too."

"Where you from young man?" asked Rush.

"West Sacramento."

"I've never been much of a fan of Sacramento. Too hot, and too many damn Democrats!"

"I said I was from West Sacramento, not Sacramento. There's a difference."

"Fewer Democrats?"

"Not so hot," I answered with a smile.

"But you say you're an Independent, huh?"

"That's right."

"You know that's just a code word for Democrat, don't you?"

Again, I returned Rush's smile and said, "So, I take it you're a Republican?"

"More important than that," he said with genuine pride, "I'm a Conservative!"

Sensing that my new friend (as true Conservatives often love to do) was just itching for a little political give and take with someone of the red tennis shoe persuasion, I allowed myself to be good-naturedly harangued for the next 15 minutes or so on many of the major political questions of the day. But Rush also allowed me to score a few points on issues like nation building and the stupidity of invading Iraq.

"But it seems like we should be able to agree on something, don't you think?" Rush finally asked.

"I'm not sure what it would be," I answered.

"I know, how about gay marriage? You said you are married, right?"

"Yes."

"And you have children, right?"

"Yes – four of them."

"Well, see, then there you go. I'm sure you must agree with me that marriage should be between only a man and a woman."

"Now why do you think that is so important?" I asked Rush with interest.

"Because if we start letting gay people get married, they will ruin that wonderful institution as sure as I'm standing here. It'll never be the same again. And without marriage staying the exact same way it has since the beginning of time – between one man and one woman — Western Civilization doesn't stand a chance."

"You really think gay people can do that much damage to the institution of marriage?"

"Of course I do! Don't you?"

"Well," I said, "it seems to me that gays have never done much of anything to harm the institution of marriage. If you ask me, it's the heterosexuals who are screwing up marriage – divorcing at a rate of more than 50%, guys beating up and even killing their wives, deadbeat dads not paying their child support, and mothers being forced to raise their children by themselves. And that's not even to mention verbal abuse, child abuse, and adultery."

"So," asked Rush in disbelief, "then you're okay with gays getting married?"

"Actually," I said to Rush, "I think the most interesting thing I've seen recently concerning the gay marriage debate was this cartoon I saw in a magazine a few months back."

"A cartoon?"

"Yeah, there was this married man and woman sitting in front of their television set – she was knitting and he was reading his newspaper. They both seemed to be ignoring each other and looked bored to death."

"Now what's that got to do with gay marriage?"

"Well, in the caption, the man says to the woman, "I can't believe they're even letting gay people get married nowadays." And the woman says, "I know – you would think that those poor people have already suffered enough."

Rush forced a half-smile but I got the distinct impression that under his breath he was thinking, "Well, what can you expect from a guy who wears red tennis shoes?"

Rabies found in Davis bats

From the County of Yolo

Seven dead bats from a colony that roosts under the West Covell Boulevard bicycle overcrossing in Davis were discovered earlier this week by a local resident walking her dog. The bats were reported to Yolo County Animal Services, who picked them up and brought them to the Yolo County Health Department laboratory for testing. Of the seven bats, three were unable to be tested, and two tested positive for the rabies virus. No human or pet contact with these bats is known to have occurred.

The Yolo County Health Department and the City of Davis have been working together to ensure that appropriate notice is placed in the area to alert people and to avoid any potential human or animal interaction with the bats.

"It has been great working with the City of Davis since we both want to achieve the

Lloyd George Hickey

Lloyd Hickey, a country music promoter who once brought top acts to West Sacramento, passed away on August 4, 2009 at the age of 80 from complications related to Alzheimer's disease. He bought the El Rancho Hotel in 1975 and revived the faded resort on West Capitol Avenue with a 24-hour restaurant, gift shop, and 800-seat showroom where cowboys mixed with Capitol politicians. Couples poured in to dance and meet top country western artists, including Donna Fargo, Rick Nelson, Marty Robbins, Tex Ritter and Ernest Tubb.

A big man who wore powder-blue Western suits studded with rhinestone windmills, Hickey himself was a legend in the country western music world and treated entertainers lavishly, hosting them in the El Rancho's biggest suites. He sold the El Rancho after four years and leased a smaller club across the street called Countryland which West Sacramento later acquired as the site for its new city hall. He retired to a houseboat in Clarksburg and enjoyed fishing and traveling in the United States, often being recognized by fans who knew him from his old weekly TV show, "Forty Grand Jamboree."

Mr. Hickey is survived by his wife of 25 years, Patty, of Madera; son, Larry of Sacramento; sister, Barbara of Dallas; and three grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his oldest son, Lloyd Jr. Services were held at Sacramento Memorial Lawn.

William "Dean" McKelvey

Friends are invited to attend funeral services on August 12, 2009 at 10 am at River Cities Funeral Chapel in West Sacramento. Interment will be in Woodland Cemetery. Memorials are preferred to the Sutter Cancer Center, 2800 L Street, Sacramento, CA 95816.

Two-alarm apartment fire

From the West Sacramento Fire Dept.

At 1:28 p.m. on August 1, three West Sacramento Fire Department engines, Truck 45 and Battalion Chief 4101 were dispatched to a structure fire at the Hunters Point Apartments, on the 900-block of Todhunter Ave.

The two-alarm fire destroyed one apartment unit and severely damaged the attic, as well as two other apartment units. When Engine 44 arrived on scene the crew reported heavy smoke visible from a second story apartment. Upon gaining access into the apartment to conduct fire attack and search & rescue operations, firefighters were met with heavy fire in the apartment.

All occupants were already outside and accounted for.

The fire quickly spread into the attic as the crew of Truck 45 performed ventilation operations on the roof of the building. A second alarm was requested to the scene. Firefighters were able to keep the fire from completely destroying the story apartment complex. 23 adults and five children that were displaced and received assistance from the Red Cross. The second alarm brought in more firefighters to help from the Sacramento, Davis and UCD Fire departments as well as an AMR ambulance for standby.

West Sacramento Police Officers assisted with scene security and traffic control. The fire, believed to be accidental, was investigated by a West Sacramento Fire Department investigator.

same thing – keeping the bat and human populations away from each other to protect the health of both," states Wayne Taniguchi, supervisor for the Yolo County Health Department Consumer Protection Unit.

"It's a delicate balance we have to achieve when it comes to dealing with bats in our county," says John McNerney, Wildlife Resource Specialist for the City of Davis. "Bats have such a negative reputation, and we want to protect these animals from potential human harm since they do serve an important role in our ecosystem."

Yolo County health officials would like to minimize human interaction with bats for the sake of human health. "The person who made the report did exactly what we ask everyone in the county to do," said Taniguchi. "She kept herself and her animals away from the dead bats and called Animal Services immediately."

All Yolo County residents are strongly advised to avoid not only direct contact with bats, but especially with those that are sick or are showing abnormal behaviors, such as lying on the ground or being out during the daytime. Any bats, healthy, sick, or dead, that have come in contact with people, pets or livestock, should be isolated and contained for testing whenever possible. All bats found inside the home, regardless of contact, should be contained and reported. Reports should be filed with the Health Department immediately at (530) 666-8646 or Yolo County Animal Services at (530) 668-5287.

For more information about rabies control in Yolo County, please contact the Yolo County Health Department at (530) 666-8646. Cool-house tips from Waste Management

From Waste Management, Inc.

Waste Management reminds California and Nevada area residents that even though temperatures are rising this summer, your energy bill and carbon footprint don't have to. Follow these tips to help "go green" while still remaining cool.

Did you know that the average home spends $1,900 on energy costs every year, and air conditioning costs can make up around 16 percent of this? Finding alternative ways to keep cool are essential to being sustainable.

One of the easiest ways to save money and energy is to set your thermostat no lower than 78° when you are at home, and at 85° or off when you are away. Each degree below 78° will increase your energy use by up to 4 percent.

Another great alternative is to install an overhead ceiling fan. Fans can make you feel three to eight degrees cooler, allowing you to set your AC to a higher temperature and still feel just as cool. An overhead fan usually cost less than a penny an hour to run. Central AC costs seventy times more to run than a fan.

Maintaining the doors and windows in your home can also provide big energy savings. Make sure they are well sealed so the cool air doesn't escape from your home. Do-it-yourself weather stripping for doors and caulk for windows is cheap and easy to install, and can decrease your energy use by around 2 percent. For energy savings as high as 10 percent, replace windows with ENERGY STAR® models to keep your home comfortable year round. Make sure to draw drapes and blinds too, as direct sunlight can raise the temperature of a room between 10-20 percent.

Another way to reduce energy consumption and cut costs is to reduce heat generated by lighting. Compact fluorescent light bulbs (CFLs) use 75 percent less energy than traditional incandescent bulbs, and generate 70-90 percent less heat. However, it is important to remember that used CFLs do not go in the trash. Waste Management sponsors numerous household hazardous waste collection events each year, and mail-back recycling kits are available for purchase at www.thinkgreenfromhome.com.

And of course, turning off the lights when you leave a room will help save energy and keep a room cool.

Finally, planting trees is a great investment, as it can help you save money on energy costs in both summer and winter. Trees planted near your home can cut your cooling bills by 15 percent to 35 percent, and a line of trees planted as a windbreak can lower your heating bill 10 percent to 20 percent. Plus, if every family in the U.S. planted one tree, we would reduce atmospheric CO2 by a billion pounds every year.

So remember, keeping cool this summer doesn't have to be at the expense of your wallet or the planet. By adopting small changes to your daily routine and making simple improvements to your home, you can make a big difference. To learn more about how simple changes can make a big impact in "going green," visit www.thinkgreen.com .

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• It was comedian and TV host Jay Leno who made the following sage observation: "Give a man a fish and he will eat for a day. Teach a man to fish and he will eat for a lifetime. Teach a man to create an artificial shortage of fish and he will eat steak."

• Those who keep track of such things say that the most popular name for pet pythons is, perhaps unsurprisingly, "Monty."

Jill Jackson's HOLLYWOOD

Tom Hanks has taken on another job. He will represent the actor's branch on the Motion Picture Academy's board of directors. This plus a full plate of film offers should keep him quite busy. Yet he manages to have fun on outings with Rita, the kids and also to walk the dogs. His latest film, "Angels and Demons," has brought in big bucks at the box office since its May release.

Patrick Dempsey has joined the cast of "Valentine's Day," a romantic comedy to be directed by Garry Marshall about five interconnecting stories that occur and play out on Valentine's Day in Los Angeles. And get this for a cast: Julia Roberts, Anne Hathaway, Jessica Biel, Jennifer Garner, Shirley MacLaine, Emma Roberts, Ashton Kutcher, Hector Elizando and still more to be added.

Aside to Kathleen H. of Pine Prairie, Texas: No, I did not know Bette Davis personally. However, I have friends who did. And indeed yes, they say she was VERY feisty, but lots of fun when she wanted to be. And there is no doubting her tremendous talent.

Aside to Karl K. of Tempe, Ariz.: You asked if I knew Joan Blondell. Yes, I was lucky enough when I first came to Hollywood to move into an apartment right next door to hers. What a kind and loving friend she turned out to be, and what wondrous tales she told me about her big starring days in the business. She also had two pug dogs that she loved with "her life." Their names were Bridey Murphy and Fresh As a Tulip, nicknamed Bridey and Freshie. Talk about SPOILED. They would eat only certain foods cooked by Miss Blondell, and "go" only on spots to their liking.

And yes, I also knew Hermione Baddeley. (Remember her as Mrs. Naugatuk in "Maude"?) She also had two dogs — these were English Bulls, and just as temperamental as Bridey and Freshie. And to add to the temperaments, they also were always groomed to the nines. Miss Baddeley herself painted their nails with pink polish, although many times her own nails went "as was." ... AND still on the subject of "pups," I also met one of Elizabeth Taylor's small, white Maltese. She was called Sugar, and everywhere Elizabeth went, "Sugar was sure to go." Her nails also were always painted (Sugar's, not Elizabeth's).

BITS 'N' PIECES: Viola Davis has high hopes, and maybe by the time you read this they will be fulfilled. She hopes to land a role in "Eat, Pray, Love" opposite Julia Roberts. ... And Russell Crowe will possibly be reprising his role of Captain Jack Aubrey in a follow-up to his "Master and Commander: The Far Side of the World." ... AND, I didn't know until I read it that both of Lon Chaney's parents were deaf mutes, or that Montgomery Clift had a twin sister.

How to prepare your child for the first day of school

From First 5 Yolo

The first day of school is exciting, but it can be a little frightening for young kids.

"Parents can help ease their child's first-day jitters by talking about it, how exciting it's going to be and what the daily schedule may look like," said Julie Gallelo, executive director of the First 5 Yolo Children and Families Commission.

First 5 Yolo offers the following tips to help ease children's anxiety on the first day of school:

Talk to your children. Discuss school activities and what the daily schedule may look like. Explain where they'll be going, what they'll be doing and for how long. Describe what to expect if they ride a school bus. Ask questions to draw out any fears they may have, and don't dismiss those fears. What may seem obvious or silly to you can feel like a giant obstacle to a child. Start by listening, and try to anticipate what they're thinking and feeling.

Make the transition as easy as possible. Take your child to school in advance to meet the teacher and get used to the new surroundings. Involve your child in choosing school clothes and supplies. Paste a picture of your family in your children's lunchboxes or give them notes to read at school. Have your child spend time with other kids and adults to develop social skills. Anxiety about going to school often stems from a fear of being with strangers.

Practice at home. Dispel anxiety by playing school at home. Have your child take turns being the student and teacher. Make it fun by using your child's favorite dolls or stuffed animals as students. Play games that require your child to take turns and speak in front of a group. Have your child read books aloud about starting school (research shows that children who spend time reading with their parents and caregivers enter school better prepared for learning). Engage in activities that require sitting for short periods of time such as painting and drawing.

Ask for help. Parents of children with learning problems or disabilities should meet the teacher and principal in advance to agree on a joint plan about how to address problems and make arrangement for regular communication and feedback. Ask the school about available resources to help with special needs children.

Set a schedule and establish routines. Research shows children who eat a healthy breakfast do better in school. They tend to be more focused and physically active. Getting a good night's sleep also is important. A child who is tired tends to be more impatient, easily frustrated and anxious. Establish a routine for your child and stick to it. Eat breakfast as a family and adhere to consistent bedtimes.

Your child's health affects learning. When kids are healthy, they focus better on what's important in school – learning! In California, kids entering public school for the first time need up-to-date immunizations and a dental exam. Be sure to have your child's hearing and vision screened as well. Alert your child's teacher and principal about any allergies, chronic medical conditions requiring special attention at school, medications that need to be given during school hours and any physical limitations your child may have.

First 5 Yolo encourages all parents to learn about local resources that can help them prepare their young children for school. For more information on school readiness, visit First 5 Yolo's Web site at www.first5yolo.org or go to www.first5california.com/parents.

COUCH THEATER DVD PREVIEWS

BY DNA SMITH

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"The Simpsons" Season 12 — OK, I confess that I haven't watched the show in years, but I do buy the boxed sets from time to time. Season 12 is definitely one for my collection. There are two versions of this collection: a standard box with a picture of the Comic Book Guy, and a limited edition box that is actually shaped like the Comic Book Guy. The reason is that Season 12 contains the classic episode, "Worst Episode. Ever" — the one where Bart and Milhouse run his store after he's had a heart attack.

In addition, there are the memorable episodes like "A Tale of Two Springfields," with guest stars The Who; "The Computer Wore Menace Shoes" a spoof of the cult series "The Prisoner;" "Trilogy of Error" — a send-off of "Run Lola Run"; and so many more.

The Season 12 collection is also jam-packed with goodies: Commentary tracks for all 21 episodes; Easter Eggs (hidden features) on all four discs; featurettes, including "Comic Book Guy: Best Moments Ever," and "The Global Fanfest."

"Tyson" — I saw this documentary in the theater last year and was blown away. Director James Toback gained unprecedented access to Mike Tyson, and the footage he got is a compelling insight into the mind of boxing's most controversial figure. It is Mike Tyson's story told by the man himself. It's not the most balanced account of his life, but then again, "Tyson" isn't meant to be that kind of documentary. It is raw; it is intimate — and a great film.

"The 5 Deadly Venoms" — If you liked "Kill Bill," then you'll love this flick. It's a cheesy, over-the-top kung-fu movie from 1978 that Quentin Tarantino "borrowed" from when creating the plot for "Kill Bill." The plot of "5 Deadly Venoms" centers around a student from the Poison Clan who must go on a quest to find the five greatest masters from the clan — each with his own unique fighting style — so they can return and save the group from destruction. I saw this movie on TV when I was a kid and thought it was awesome. I'm gonna grab a copy of the DVD to see if it still holds up.

Q: Will Johnny Depp be making any more "Pirates of the Caribbean" movies? I hope so. Those are such fun. — James B., Atlanta

A: Johnny Depp is on board (pun intended) for the fourth installment of the popular pirate-movie franchise; however, you can count out two of his co-stars. Keira Knightley and Orlando Bloom have both stated that the third movie would be their last. This is OK with the folks at Disney, as word has it that the story in the fourth film is going to center more on the new adventures of Jack Sparrow.

Q: I heard that Renee Zellwegger has signed on for a third "Bridget Jones" movie. Is this true? If so, who will be writing it, since there is no third book in the series? — Hallie H., via e-mail

A: You did hear correctly: Renee will be filming a third "Bridget Jones" movie, with this installment to focus on Bridget's desire to have a baby. While Helen Fielding, the author of the "Bridget Jones" books, has not written a third book for this sequel, the movie will still be based on Helen's writings. The new script is based on a series of columns she wrote for the British newspaper The Independent. As of this writing, there is no word on whether Colin Firth and Hugh Grant will be back as Mark Darcy and Daniel Cleaver, respectively.

Q: I love comedian/actor Michael Ian Black. What is he up to lately? — Jenny W., via e-mail

A: Michael has reteamed with comedy partner Michael Showalter in Comedy Central's "Michael and Michael Have Issues," which has received rave reviews. Also, after a 10-year wait, you can catch Michael's earlier work on the hilarious comedy sketch show "The State," which has just been released on DVD. He is a prolific writer, and many of his comic musings have been featured in The Los Angeles Times, Wired and CMJ Magazine, to name a few. He also was a co-writer for his many sketch-comedy shows, including "The State," "Viva Variety," "Stella" and the current "Michael and Michael Have Issues."

Q: A few years back, HBO said it was going to make two two-hour movies to tie up the loose ends of the "Deadwood" series. Is this ever going to happen? — Bill F., Fort Worth, Texas

Johnny Depp

A: It's not looking good for the proposed "Deadwood" movies. When the series ended in 2006, it left a lot of story lines — and fans — in the lurch. The idea of creating the movies had been proposed a few years back, but it now looks like a dead project. "Deadwood" star Ian McShane himself has said that a movie isn't happening. "I don't think that myth's about to be revisited," he said in a recent interview. Ray McKinnon, who played Rev. H.W. Smith in the series, backs up Ian's statement with: "It would be too hard to bring everyone together."

"Hold Love Strong"
By Matthew Aaron Goodman
(Touchstone, $24.99)
Reviewed by Katy Olson

Abraham Singleton's mother's addiction to crack leaves her dead, facedown and with bullets through her skull. Abraham's uncle, a local basketball star and hero to the kids of the Ever Park housing project, lives for years in incarceration for handling drugs. His father is absent, and everyone near young Abraham seems perilously close to falling over the slippery edge of poverty, violence and drug addiction that so many others have fatally tumbled over before.

Somehow, in this debut novel, "Hold Love Strong," author Matthew Aaron Goodman becomes his protagonist, an African-American boy born to a 13-year-old in the bathroom of a New York City housing project apartment. A testament to the author's creativity, the novel reads more as a memoir than fiction.

The familiar characters — the doomed but aspirational young men who turn to drug dealing for fast cash, the worn-down, churchgoing matriarchs, the gifted son who makes it to college — have been seen before, but it is the book's depth of understanding and deft lyricism that make "Hold Love Strong" come alive where comparable books have not. Abraham's struggle is not just to escape Ever Park, it is a struggle to believe, despite the daily proof against it, that a better life for his family might exist; it is a hope that is pinned to his college acceptance letter.

As much a loving testimony to the venerable Gran, the young grandmother who binds Abraham's family together with a love "greater than anything presented by the Bible, the Torah and the Quran combined," Abraham's telling of his story is an evocative, full-color portrait of the hearts broken countless times by the cruelty of poverty, and of how those hearts are ever-repaired by the love of family and the tiniest — but most powerful — of hopes.

Smoked Chicken Adds Extra Dimension to Meals

This weekend, I plan to use my barbeque grill to prepare several chickens. Grilling a few extra chickens has become one of my favorite ways to stock my freezer. I love to place fresh herbs like rosemary on the coals with aromatic wood chips to enhance the smoky flavor of the meat. When the chicken is almost done, I'll baste some of the pieces with a spicy barbeque sauce that I make using my favorite commercially bottled brand as the base.

The rest of the chicken pieces will be smoked until done, but without any barbeque sauce. I place some of the plain, smoked chicken pieces in freezer bags. I label the bags so that I know exactly how long the chicken has been in the freezer. I'll serve these whole pieces, plain or with a rosemary-flavored sauce, over rice, potatoes, pasta or couscous. The grilled chicken pieces will save me several hours on nights when I need some fast food from the freezer.

The rest of the smoked chicken will be used in a variety of ways. I'll remove the skin, shred the meat, and portion out one or two cups into small freezer bags. The shredded chicken will be used on salads, in tacos, soups, and casseroles, and for sandwiches and wraps..

Grilling chickens and freezing it is a delicious way to save time and money! This easy-to-prepare recipe for smoked chicken ensures that the meat will be flavorful and moist.

SMOKED CHICKEN

- 2 whole chickens (3 to 4 pounds) or (3 to 4 pounds) chicken pieces
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 2 1/2 teaspoons black pepper
- 2 1/2 teaspoons poultry seasoning
- 1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
- 6 to 8 sprigs of fresh rosemary, soaked in water
- 3 1/2 cups Kicked Up Bottled Barbeque Sauce (see recipe below)

Remove excess fat from the inside of the whole chickens or the chicken pieces and discard it. Rinse the meat under cool, running water. Cut the whole chickens into quarters — wing-breast-backbone or thigh-drumstick-backbone. Rub the pieces with the oil. Season on both sides with salt, pepper, poultry seasoning and red pepper flakes.

KICKED-UP BOTTLED BARBEQUE SAUCE

- 1 (28 ounce) bottle barbeque sauce
- 1 medium onion, minced
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon spicy brown mustard
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice or apple cider vinegar
- 1 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/2 to 1 teaspoon cayenne pepper or hot sauce, to taste

Mix all of the ingredients together in a glass bowl. Cover with plastic wrap or a plate and microwave on 50 percent heat (or the defrost function) for 15 minutes, stirring once every 5 minutes.

To Smoke the Chicken:

Remove old ashes from the grill, and clean the grate with a wire brush. Add the wood charcoal and ignite. When the charcoal has burned to white ash, place the chicken quarters skin side down on the grate to render some of the fat and crisp the skin.

Add the water-soaked rosemary sprigs and a handful of water-soaked hickory chips to the edge of the fire to create an aromatic smoke. Partially close the vents on the top of the lid of the grill to seal in the smoke.

After 8 to 10 minutes, turn the chicken skin-side up. If the smoke dies down, add another handful of hickory chips. Heavily baste half of the chicken pieces with the barbeque sauce (leaving the rest of the pieces without any sauce, if you plan to freeze them for later use in another recipe). Move the pieces around to keep them from burning. Grill the chicken for an additional 12 to 15 minutes until done, making sure the meat is cooking evenly on both sides.

Yolo County adopts rules meant to encourage B&Bs and 'agri-tourism'

By Beth Gabor
County of Yolo

Last week, the Yolo County Board of Supervisors adopted the Health Department, Division of Environmental Health's new food facility policy for agricultural homestays and bed & breakfast inns. The new policy is intended to encourage tourism in Yolo County, while at the same time ensuring retail food facilities are constructed and operated in a manner protective of public health. The policy allows agri-tourism-related food facilities to operate from modified kitchens in private homes, rather than meeting commercial kitchen requirements.

The California Retail Food Code (CRFC) establishes exemptions from portions of the CRFC for "restricted" food service facilities. These exemptions allow specified food service facilities to operate from modified residential kitchens using residential equipment rather than meeting the construction and equipment standards required of other food facilities. Such facilities include agricultural homestays as well as bed & breakfasts. These facilities are "restricted" in the number of meals prepared daily, providing for food protection in the more relaxed environment of a residential-style kitchen.

"This policy consolidates regulations for these niche facilities and for those interested in starting an agri-tourism business," said Yolo County Environmental Health Director Bruce Sarazin in a county press release. "The policies are intended to keep construction costs down for the operator without compromising food safety and the public's health."

Other exemptions allowed by the policy includes, floor construction standards, janitorial storage, separation from living quarters, a separate hand-washing sink, restrooms signs, and dressing room and locker requirements. Equipment exemptions allow for the use of non-commercial equipment for ventilation, refrigeration, food and non-food storage equipment, and dishwashers.

"With our many wineries, recreational activities and unique agricultural communities, Yolo County is becoming a well-known destination for agri-tourism," said Yolo County Board of Supervisors Chair Mike McGowan in a written press statement. "Our policies, from land-use to environmental health, demonstrate the high value we place on our agricultural heritage, those who work in the industry, and our desire to share all that is great about Yolo County with those who come to visit."

The new Agricultural Homestay/Bed & Breakfast Food Facility Policy was developed in cooperation with the following Yolo County departments: Agriculture, Planning & Public Works and the Economic Development division of the County Administrator's Office. For more information, visit: http://www.yolocounty.org/Index.aspx?page=92 or contact the Yolo County Environmental Health Division at (530) 666-8646. A comprehensive permit handbook covering all aspects of establishing agri-tourism attractions is also available at http://www.yolocounty.org/Index.aspx?page=357.
